UNFPA Shows Weakness in Protests Against Trump

Dear Colleague,

Support Our Work

Donald Trump sure caused a stir at UN headquarters right before the just concluded UN Commission on Population and Development when he announced defunding of the aggressive pro-abortion agency UNFPA, that boasts a billion-dollar budget. Dr. Susan Yoshihara reports their response shows a raft of weaknesses.

The World Health Organization has announced new guidance for the use of a nasty injectable contraceptive called Depo Provera. Even though it present substantial health risks, they still urge African women to use it! Dr. Rebecca Oas reports.

Protest to Trump's Defunding UNFPA Reveals Poor Results, Lackluster Support

By Susan Yoshihara, Ph D.

NEW YORK, April 14 (C-Fam)
President Donald J. Trump cut U.S. funding to the UN Population Fund last week, and protests from Democrats, abortion groups, and UNFPA revealed UNFPA's dogged determination to partner with abortion groups, lackluster results in improving maternal health, and alienation of constituents due to controversial promotion of sexual rights. We are in need of funding to meet a $44,000 budget shortfall. Can you help us right now?

Spread the word. Be brave.

Yours sincerely,

WHO Still Pushing Dangerous Contraceptive on African Women at Risk

By Rebecca Oas, Ph.D.

WASHINGTON, April 14 (C-Fam) The World Health Organization is urging women to use a contraceptive known to increase the risk of HIV. The WHO's long-awaited guidance for use of Depo Provera admits what growing evidence has supported: a link between increased HIV risk and use of the injectable contraceptive. Yet the agency asserts that Depo remains a viable option for "women at high risk of acquiring HIV" because "the advantages of these methods generally outweigh the possible increased risk of HIV acquisition."

Head of UN Population Fund Denies U.S. Epidemic of Sexually Transmitted Diseases

While the withdrawal of U.S. assistance for the UN Population Fund (UNFPA) was ostensibly about the might have justifiably been worried about the direction the Agency has taken under the leadership of

Trump Could Cut Global Gender Office Exempt From Mexico City Policy Protection

Dear Colleague,

Support Our Work

President Trump's proposed budget seeks a 28 percent reduction within the State Department. Secretary Tillerson will oversee the foreign aid overhaul which will require better efficiency in the allocation of U.S. dollars for development assistance. Hopefully this restores a balanced global health program for those most in need and the elimination of all funding to international abortion groups which was institutionalized under the Obama administration.

In our second article Susan Yoshihara covers a recent UNICEF report that acknowledges many of the kidnapped girls being released by terrorists are pregnant. Helping these girls with re-entry is crucial but the UN agency responsible for assisting vulnerable children must also recognize that these young mothers need recognition and services for the children they have and will bear as well.

We thank you for your continued partnership. We can't do it without you!

Born of War Rape Still Unclear

By Susan Yoshihara, Ph.D.

NEW YORK, April 28 (C-Fam) The UN Children's Fund recently acknowledged that many of the girls returning from captivity by terrorists are pregnant, but stopped short of treating the maternity of the girls, or the children they bear, as a separate area of concern for the agency. Read more >>

Epidemic? Says WHO?

Earlier this week, the World Health Organization (WHO) hosted a webinar to discuss its updated guidance on Depo Provera, issued in response to reports suggesting its users may be at increased risk for acquiring HIV. As we reported in the Friday Fax, WHO called for women to be given counselling, but continued to encourage the use of Depo among women at high risk of HIV on the grounds that the downsides were outweighed by the benefits. These benefits are presumably limited to the avoidance of pregnancy. Read more >>
